charity which gives children and adults with disabilities the opportunity to have a camping holiday. The site, which is just outside Farnham, in Surrey, has many facilities and allows the campers to try things they'd never have thought possible, such as aerial runway, archery or even just cooking on a fire. Different camps run throughout the summer and are staffed entirely by volunteers, who provide all the care the campers need. Some campers have very profound disabilities and complex needs. (I have volunteered as a

The site has a major redevelopment campaign, which aims to totally update facilities which have been built and added to over the past 70 years and some of which are badly in need of replacement to provide a modern standard of care.
