

IT and Communications

Simon Norman

In a world where financial transparency and accountability are increasingly important, and a myriad of events and societies vie for your attention, it falls to communications officers to enable efficient and relevant information is reported to members in a timely manner.

As your IT and Communications officer, I would aim to ensure that all information that the JPC has, is transmitted out to the student body. Whether that be posting the JPC accounts online for everyone's access; updating the online archives of JPC minutes; or just distributing the weekly JPC email.

My other aim for office is to persuade the college that 2GB of personal internet usage is inadequate, and falls below the standards other colleges have introduced. In a world of increasingly bandwidth-intensive browsing, we must stay ahead of our needs.

On Election Day, please vote Simon Norman for IT and Communications

Thank you
